

THE QUAD

ABX 2017  GREENBUILD[®]
INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE AND EXPO

“Quad”, short for “Quadrangle”, is one term for the public square at the center of a college campus. It’s a space to take naps in the grass on a sunny day, throw a Frisbee with friends, or where inspirational lectures are given on a warm spring afternoon. The experience of the quad is one of vibrancy, playfulness, and connectivity. In our increasingly dense urban habitats, city dwellers seek to discover similar environments in the places they live, work, and play.

CALL FOR ENTRIES!

THE CALL

QUAD 2017 is seeking design proposals that capture the essence of social sustainability by addressing the various factors contributing to the three pillars of sustainability: Environment, Economy and Equity.

Environmental Sustainability promotes a more conscious urban lifestyle with a lower carbon footprint. In a built environment where resources are scarce, your proposal should consider efficient use, as well as post-installation applications, of building material.

Economic Sustainability encourages an efficient use of resources. The exhibit should achieve the greatest visual and experiential impact with the least amount of resources. The proposed design should also address ease of travel and speed of assembly.

Equity Sustainability occurs when current and future generations are actively supported to create healthy and livable communities that are diverse and socially just. Proposals should envision meaningful and impactful spaces that facilitate social interaction, allow exposure to diverse backgrounds and create an environment leading to mutual respect and acceptance. Low-cost and/or high-tech interactive features are highly encouraged to assist this component.
